

CHURCH AT HOME

Issue 28: October 17th 2020

Welcome, brothers and sisters to the twenty-Eighth edition of "Church at Home".

I had another trip to A&E this week. After her younger brother fell on her arm, we needed to get Grace checked out. Sure enough she has broken it just below the elbow. Thus, I spent a night in Darent Valley thinking about bones.

You all know the song – "Them bones, them bones, them dry bones, now I hear the word of the Lord". Now I've put that tune in your head let me remind you what it's based on.

Ezekiel 37:1-14 is I would suggest one of the more macabre bits of scripture. The prophet comes across the slain army of Israel. The harsh desert has left just bones remaining. But the Lord in his wisdom uses this scene of death and destruction to give a message of hope to God's people.

The message is this. From this death will come hope and a new start and new way of doing things. Because in spite of everything that has happened the one thing we can be sure of, is that God always bounces back. I look forward to being part of the journey.

Follow the guidance, encourage each other, pray and stay safe.

To join us on the night, all you have to do is either click on the following link <https://us02web.zoom.us/j/84092729164?pwd=QzVqdE10NDQ3N0pNOHdOeVo2Sz1DUT09> or open the 'Zoom' app and type in the following Meeting ID and Password.

Meeting ID: 840 9272 9164

As it would be good to know how many teams we are expecting on the night, please could you email your names and team name to thegills41@virginmedia.com. This would be great to put some names to faces as we may not have had the pleasure of meeting you all yet and what a great way to get acquainted.

Please remember that whether you are on your own, in a couple or a family of all ages, everyone is welcome and there is a small prize for the team/individual with the highest score!!

Mission

Update from our mission partner, Beryl Baker from her friend Eileen Hollingsworth

Beryl is a nurse who works in Paraguay. She has been on the mission field for over 50 years and we have supported her as a mission partner throughout that time.

Dear praying friends.

Things have gone from bad to worse all over the country as the drought continues and forest fires have destroyed thousands of acres of woods and grasslands. The smoke hung over Asuncion like an old fashion smog and people were advised to stay indoors. Sharon for one has been trying to clean up her porch and stairs from a thick layer of ashes. Many people suffered from bad eyes and chests because of the toxic smoke.

Prayer meetings continue at the ranch and Sunday before last all the men came as well as the women and children. Tito was asleep as he was so worn out but apologised later for not joining everyone else to pray. He is now looking for water reserves underground. They do exist and the water can be pumped up and piped or transported to people's homes and the drinking troughs for the animals.

I went to La Patria on Saturday and as usual attended a lot of patients

The heat and high winds have continued. The cats and dogs are flaked out with the heat.

Today I had an out of the blue dental appointment and will return to see a specialist tomorrow at 8.30am DV. My original Mennonite dentist in town has been treating Sharon and when she mentioned her concern for my teeth he told her he would see me as soon as I came to town and he did!! It was great seeing him again and the work he did today gives me hope that most of the teeth can be saved. Sharon is footing the bill.

Bernardino is not interested in anything spiritual at present and just wants to lie in a hammock in the shade. The heat is very trying.

Several indigenous people have died in one of the communities at Sombrero Piri and others there are now taking the virus seriously.

Will send this and write more when my battery is recharged.

I read the story of Caleb's daughter's wedding gift which was the land of Negev meaning dry land. She asked her father for water and Caleb gave her fountes of water from above and below, that is upper and lower springs. Judges 1.14 15.

Jesus said ask and it will be given Luke 11.9.10

Rain is forecast for tonight in certain parts. We wait upon the Lord.

Much love and prayers
Beryl

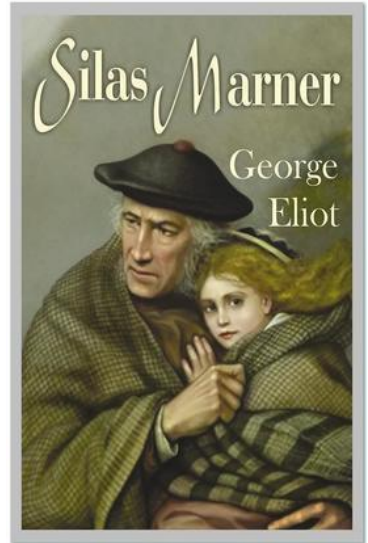

Something Worth Reading

By A. Soule

Quite often when people talk about a well-known book that you may have read at school or whilst growing up, it could well occur to you that you hadn't really cottoned then to what the book was about.

I experienced this with George Eliot's Silas Marner which I re-read recently. I was surprised at the depth of the story - describing the way life turns corners, and yet in the end, the past and present coalescing into a well-wrought plan.

The story is set in the early nineteenth century and is about Silas Marner, a weaver by trade who starts off as a committed member of a closed Christian community in a Northern town. As a man of upright standing in the community there, Silas is asked to keep vigil over a sick member of the community. Silas falls asleep briefly and when he wakes up, money is discovered missing from the room. Despite his protestations that he knew nothing about the theft, he is blamed. Silas points to his blameless conduct and standing in the church community, but the religious community decides his guilt by first praying for guidance and then casting lots. The lots go against Silas and despite his innocence, he is blamed. Understandably Silas is outraged at the injustice and concludes that there was no divine control of the world.

Silas leaves the town and settles in Raveloe (another small town) and immerses himself in his work, only taking joy in the money that he has saved stored in little bags, until one day someone breaks into his cottage and takes away all his money. He is utterly distraught.

The story progresses further, when with one day a little girl crawls into his cottage, Silas picks up the baby girl but sees outside nearby the girl's mother lying dead on the road. He adopts the girl, looks after her and his whole world changes. He discovers a definite purpose and joy in his life. The girl grows up to love Silas as her father and chooses to live with him and take care of him even when her real father is discovered.

George Eliot (whose real name was Mrs Evans), wasn't given to overt moralising, but the novel touches on complicated theological debates. How could something done with prayer come up with unjust consequences? Being wrongly blamed and then robbed of all honest earnings seems to go against our understanding of natural justice.

But these things do happen, and sometimes with all good intentions and prayers, things do not go as wished for. What can come across is that we are powerless in the face of circumstances.

That being so, our lives are not governed by the flip of a coin; both sides equally viable, heads or tail. There is value in standing in the right corner, doing what is right in all circumstances, being governed by the light of truth: as mentioned by Christ 'ye are the light of the world' . The community which made the decision to blame Silas did so knowingly, by closing their eyes to his defence.

Silas eventually did find joy and happiness in caring for the little girl who had walked into his cottage. One can also surmise that there was a realisation that his early 'religious life' was shallow in seeking contentment within a closed community, blind to wider compassion or love for the neighbour in its truest sense - as taught by Christ.

There may also have been a realisation that his love of money later had shut him to what life was really about. And perhaps the love and care he bestowed on the child was what was needed for him to be led back to church and community in the end. He may well have also pondered whether after all there may have been a higher power which had been putting things right in his life.

Learning to care for just one person can open the way to greater love. What happens in future is not for us to know but what connects our sorrows and joys, our past, present and future, is the arc of love - God's love, present in the tough times as well as in the good times. Listening to the ups and downs of Silas's life Mrs Winthrop, a plain-speaking village woman in the novel comes to the conclusion that God above us is much more merciful than we think and if anything looks unclear to us it is because there are plenty of things we don't know.

REBOOT CAMPAIGN

Over the last few months, the pandemic has disrupted the entire world and affected all of us.

The climate crisis threatens even greater disruption. And it's the poorest communities across the world who are already being hit the hardest.

'We used to get rain every four to five months, and the area was very fertile and green,' says Orbisa, a 35-year-old mother in Ethiopia. 'But it hasn't rained for six months and I don't know when it will rain next. I feel worried whenever I think about the future.'

Now, because of the changing climate, Orbisa and her children don't have enough water to survive. She walks up to ten hours a day, every day, to find water for her family to drink.

Around the world, millions of people like Orbisa are being pushed back into poverty by climate change. But we can speak up about this injustice.

Alongside The Climate Coalition, Tearfund is calling on the UK the UK government to lead the world towards a healthier, greener and fairer future. Please consider signing the declaration too – together, we can be a powerful voice and help create a better world for us all.

Sign the declaration at www.tearfund.org

Please continue to pray for a breakthrough in the climate crisis, and for protection for those most affected by it.

With every blessing,

Agnes McGrane

Tearfund is one of our mission partners at St Paul's

This has been a season of loss – from a loss of normality and community, to the far greater loss of health and loved ones. It is okay to be upset in this season, and it's important that we recognise the struggles and challenges we have faced, and continue to face, as individuals, communities and as a country.

There are so many opinions at every angle, so many stats, figure and fears as the rules and regulations seem to be ever-changing. Even in recent days, millions are affected as many places across the UK face increasing restrictions.

In this season, we as Christians must remember that hope has a name, and His name is Jesus. We live in the light of eternity; and while we long for the day when we no longer talk about coronavirus restrictions, today, we must stand on the rock of ages and come to Him in prayer as we love our neighbours.

What does it look like to love our neighbours in this season? It means being responsible for the sake of others. We need to look out for others as we seek to serve the least, last and lost. We need to reach out to those in need and ask how we can support them. We also need to love our neighbours by praying.

Let us devote ourselves to prayer, interceding for those around us. Let us pray for our church communities, that we would be bold and courageous to step out to those around us with the good news of Jesus as we love and serve them. Let us pray for our country, for healing and protection as we all battle together against this virus. And let us pray for our political leaders and all those in authority, that they may have wisdom to make good decisions and stand united for the sake of our country.

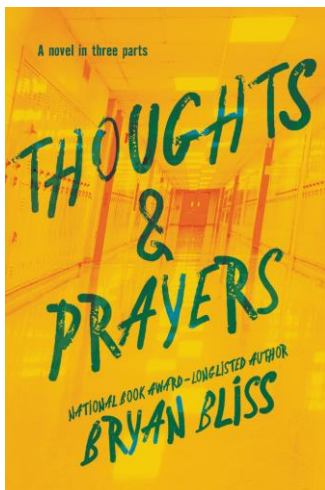

We believe in the power of prayer. Things change when we pray. So, let us be committed to prayer, as we stand on the hope of Jesus. Let us give Him all our uncertainty and struggles, allowing us to be a source of hope, peace and a non-anxious presence as we serve our neighbours in Jesus' name.

Every blessing,

Gavin Calver

Books

This week's book suggestions come from The Englewood Review

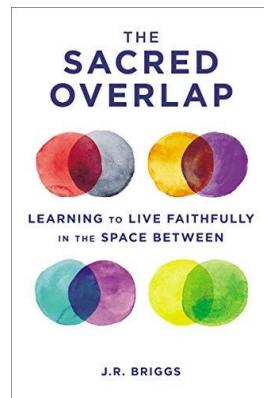

Thoughts And Prayers by Bryan Bliss

Claire, Eleanor, and Brezzen have little in common. Claire fled to Minnesota with her older brother, Eleanor is the face of a social movement, and Brezzen retreated into the fantasy world of Wizards & Warriors. But a year ago, they were linked. They all hid under the same staircase and heard the shots that took the lives of some of their classmates and a teacher. Now, each one copes with the trauma as best as they can, even as the world around them keeps moving.

The Sacred Overlap by J.R. Briggs

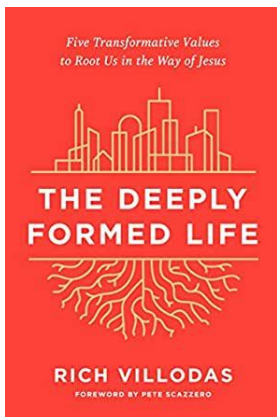

The widening of political, racial, generational, and religious differences often leads to an “us vs. them” mentality all too common today. In The Sacred Overlap, author J.R. Briggs communicates a refreshing vision that embraces tension and calls us to live in radical love and faithfulness between the extremes that isolate and divide people.

Read the gospels and you'll see how Jesus was committed to crossing cultural, social, political and religious either/or waters, engaging in many and/also activities. He comforted the disturbed and also disturbed the comfortable.

The Deeply Formed Life by Rich Villodas

During our chaotic times, discover five forgotten values that can spark internal growth and help us reconcile our Christian faith with the complexities of race, sexuality, and social justice. Most believers live in the state of “being a Christian” without ever being deeply formed by Christ. Our pace is too frenetic to be in union with God, and we don't know how to quiet our hearts and minds to be present. Our emotions are unhealthy and compartmentalized. We feel unable to ~~love~~ love well or live differently from the rest of the world—to live as people of the good news.

Note

In order to confirm that you are eligible to act as a charity trustee, all newly elected PCC members will be required to sign a declaration confirming their eligibility to hold office as a charity trustee eligibility (i.e. non-disqualification under charity law) and will be asked to sign a Fit and Proper Person declaration. A copy of these declarations can be found at www.parishresources.org.uk/pccs/apcms/. By confirming that you are eligible for election, you are confirming that you are able to sign these declarations.
